

DAILY COMMENT ON PEOPLE AND THINGS

That war scare is dying down, and with it the stud-horse headlines in the warlike press.

Fortunately the jingoes didn't stampede Wilson even a little bit.

Evidently the State street stores were trying to make address newspapers of the Record-Herald and Inter-Ocean.

If those papers were dependent only on their readers and not on their advertisers they could tell State street to go hang.

Why should the Colorado miners surrender their guns unless the gunmen do the same?

They say young Rockefeller is indisposed. Probably beginning to feel the contempt of his fellow men.

He'll never be happy, anyhow. Started in life too badly handicapped with wealth he didn't earn.

Wealth has its price. Whoever has it must pay the price, in peace of mind or something else.

That's a new one Upton Sinclair sprung—finding out if we can have free silence if denied free speech.

Thompson and Weeghman seem to get along very nicely with union restaurants.

The policy of live and let live works out all right in the long run.

Woman in all her glory will be on dress parade in Chicago today.

We might as well admit the truth—this would be a sorry, dismal old world without the girls.

No substitute has yet been found for 'em.

Before the Trib goes too far in backing up young Rockefeller it had better read the evidence about that slaughter of the innocents at Ludlow.

Those who were on the ground know more about the facts than Rockefeller away off in New York.

And the evidence of eye-witnesses points to cold-blooded murder.

Gee, but some of the jingo papers hate to give up that war. The people have quit falling for the every-minute extras.

The latest gossip about Willie Hearst is that he has gone bugs about that tango thing and wants to dance it all the time.

Fine business. Teaches a man to think with his feet, and that ought to help some with Willie.

The frequent arrest of working men and women on trivial charges is making arrest quite respectable.

People are getting over the notion that there is disgrace attached to being arrested in the industrial war.

Ellen Gates Starr suffered no loss of dignity, but rather gained public respect by being arrested in Chicago for helping the waitresses.

Now Upton Sinclair and others are lending dignity to arrest in New York.

* President Wilson, through Sec'y of War Garrison, has taken the right tack in requiring corporations as well as individuals to give up their guns in Colorado.

This means disarming of the murderous gunmen as well as of the striking miners.

That indicates that Uncle Sam isn't going to stand for that gunman stuff in the coal country—at least so long as federal troops are on the job.

Now watch the cowardly gunman skedaddle out of the danger zone. They won't fight without guns.

And they prefer to have those they fight unarmed.

Too bad the governors of Michigan and Colorado didn't do the same thing early in the game.

Just think of it—they had policemen on guard to protect Rockefeller's New York church.

* Is churchianity to have its gunmen, too?
